THE INDIANA STATE LIBRARY

The Indiana State Library was created in 1825. Since 1925 control of the library has been vested in the Indiana Library and Historical Board. In 1933 the library moved into its present quarters, the State Library and Historical Building, 140 North Senate Avenue, Indianapolis 4.

Originally created for the use of state officials, the library since 1903 has served the entire state through loans to other libraries and direct loans to individuals in areas without local library service. In 1925 the State Library absorbed the Public Library Commission and has since served as the library extension agency of the state.

It is a depository for federal documents and for books in braille and talking book records. Its special collections include materials for genealogical research, the state archives, Indiana newspapers, and all types of material relating to Indiana.

Two other libraries are also housed in the same building: the Indiana Academy of Science Library and the William Henry Smith Memorial Library of the Indiana Historical Society.

The Library Occurrent is issued in March, June, September and December. It is distributed free of charge in Indiana. Entered as second class matter June 13, 1911, at the postoffice at Indianapolis, Indiana, under the act of July 16, 1894. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided in Sec. 1103, Acts of October 3, 1917, authorized on June 29, 1918.

GARY OBSERVES LIBRARY WEEK

By STILLMAN K. TAYLOR, assistant librarian, Gary Public Library

The designation of Indiana Library Week each year by the Governor gives libraries in Indiana splendid opportunity to coordinate local programs of library publicity and activities with a state-wide event. Gary's first all-out effort was in 1950 and another program was conducted this spring.

The Library staff feels there are two specific values in the observance: (1) it establishes a framework for concerted effort of the staff to publicize the various services of the library, and (2) it is an opportunity to bring staff know-how and enthusiasm into cooperative teamwork cutting across departmental lines. Every staff member had some role to play in the 1953 observance, whether it was over-all planning or the execution of some small detail.

Planning Committee

Plans for Indiana Library Week started in February when Harold Tucker, the librarian, appointed a committee to formulate objectives and activities for the Week. The assistant librarian was chairman of the committee with the head of Extension Department, a reference librarian, and a branch librarian. This committee held its first meeting in March and discussed general plans which were written down indicating which staff member would be responsible for each phase of the program.

Four types of activity were planned: (1) displays, (2) publicity, (3) a book-author luncheon, and (4) a staff book meeting on the radio. Once the general activities were decided upon, the committee listed the various types of specific activity under each heading. This outline of the program enabled the planning group to visualize the entire program and to evaluate the amount of emphasis to be given each phase.

Displays

Each branch librarian was sent a package of signs to be used in branch neighborhood store windows. One sign, "These Books Available at Your Public Library," was for use with window displays exhibiting books. The poster published by the National Library Bindery showing a barefoot boy reading a book and the words "Your Public Library is Helping to Make the Better Citizen of Tomorrow" was for use in stores which could only use a sign. Many branch librarians commented that most stores only wanted the sign, although in the opinion of branch librarians book displays would have been used if the stores had been notified earlier, in time to plan a window around the Library Week theme. Some branches, however, did succeed in getting book display space.

The Main Library staff was responsible for displays in the downtown area. These were arranged with the display departments of the stores; often all we had to do was to deliver the books to be used to the display manager who had a poster made in his department.

One department store exhibited garden clothes with garden books and made the sign for the exhibit: "Garden with the experts," and another made signs to go with a series of travel displays occupying a part of several windows: "Books—your passport to good travel." "Out of the blue" was the poster for radio and TV books exhibited in a radio store window; a sports store had sport books along with sports equipment with a sign: "Master the game," and a flower and gift shop: "Design for pleasant living."

The public utility company gave us a whole window for a display of library materials. In this window "Your library card entitles you to —" was the main poster with ribbons leading to signs and materials: records, films, books, pamphlets, and magazines.

Publicity

The majority of the library publicity for the week was through the newspaper, although the radio station was used for special announcements. Spot announcements over WWCA called attention to Library Week and advertised the book-author luncheon.

Newspaper publicity was of two types: (1) the regular newspaper stories of activities and (2) a special series (which appeared daily) of picture-stories. Certain patrons were invited to have their picture taken at times scheduled by the newspaper photographer. Pictures and stories showed how people borrow films and records, listen to story hours, use magazines, and develop house plans. The picture series was planned to tell what the Library has for all age groups from children to senior citizens. Other news stories were on the Mayor's proclamation of Gary Library Week, film showings, and the book-author luncheon.

For some time the Library has wanted to do an adult book program over the local radio station, but never found either the time or the people to do it. As part of Indiana Library Week, the committee decided to ask the radio station to tape-record a typical staff book meeting. The station was skeptical, but agreed to make the recording and determine whether to use it after hearing the results. The staff was pleased that during playback the station manager suggested that it be used on Sunday as the opening program for Indiana Library Week.

radio station and reviewed ten books for a half-hour program. The librarian gave an introduction to the meeting so that listeners would know that the purpose of the program was to show the public how the Library staff selects books. Books used were of a variety of types, including one book which was not recommended for purchase.

Purpose of the program was to show the public that the Library is selective in its purchase of materials and does not buy "everything." Posters announcing the time the tape would be played over the air were displayed in all the branches and the program talked up by the librarians. Many patrons commented on the program and felt it should be a regular feature.

Book-author Luncheon

Climax of the week was a book-author luncheon with Mary Jane Ward as guest speaker. Five hundred printed invitations were mailed to library patrons—practically everyone on the staff contributing names to the mailing list. Fifty posters were distributed to library branches and stores. Three hundred and fifty tickets were printed and distributed to the staff for selling. A total of 214 tickets were sold and 195 people attended the luncheon, which was held at 12:30 on Saturday at the Hotel Gary.

Miss Ward captivated her audience and Gary witnessed (and participated in) its first affair of this kind. This program probably took more out of the staff than all the rest of the activities combined, yet was very successful and created a tremendous amount of library publicity and good-will. At the conclusion of the program many people came up to the speaker's table to ask us when we would put on such a program again.

Cost of Program

In terms of cost the Library broke even on the program. From the ticket sale we were able to pay for tickets, invitations, posters and the speaker. The staff certainly feels that next time it will be easier to sell tickets and many people who had refused to buy tickets, or had other plans, let us know during the following week that they were really sorry they had missed it.

In reviewing what Gary did during Indiana Library Week it is interesting to note how many projects were completed; also, that some of the projects entered into with many doubts were the most successful. Some on the committee doubted that we could get people out for a book-author luncheon, but we have proved that we can. Although the staff as a whole did participate in the observance and in helping to make it a success, the committee feels that more staff participation is needed next time and that the committee should be a larger one using staff members who have not worked on it before.

Library Week Dates

Since Indiana Library Week dates are set by the Indiana Library Association Executive Board, announcement of the exact time for the Week early in February would give libraries sufficient time to do adequate planning for the observance. In arranging for local activities—display space, special programs, etc., exact dates must be known. The proclamation by the Governor could be made a few weeks in advance of the beginning of the Week, which would assist libraries in arranging for pictures of local officials making similar proclamations.

In the case of Gary we discovered that as far as the community at large and the elimination of conflicts with other events in town are concerned, late March or the first week in April would be a suitable time for Indiana Library Week. We strongly recommend to the I.L.A. Executive Board that the time be decided early in the year and set for March when other local activities are not so numerous as they are in April.

Indiana Library Week gives focus to library activities, enables staff to work on a project which has a definite time period, and makes the community more aware of the library's role in the lives of its citizens.

CONFERENCE PLANNED

Adult education activities for Indiana libraries will be featured in the program of the annual Indiana Library Association—Indiana Library Trustees Association conference November 9-11 at the Lincoln Hotel in Indianapolis.

The adult education theme has been chosen to focus attention upon the report of the recent A.L.A. Survey of Adult Education in Public Libraries scheduled for September publication. Monday afternoon's general session will be concerned with the findings of this Survey and their application to the Indiana situation.

Stillman Taylor, assistant librarian, Gary Public Library, will conduct this session. It is hoped that a speaker representing the A.L.A. may be secured. Discussions may be continued at the public library round tables Monday evening, with a report at the business session Tuesday.

The conference will open with registration Monday morning, November 9. An outline of the tentative schedule of meetings appears on the cover of this issue. When the Library Occurrent went to press, speakers for the banquet, and general session, as well as those for trustees luncheon and S.L.A. dinner, had not been announced.

John H. Moriarty, I.L.A. president and director, Purdue University Libraries, and Mrs. A. H. Moeller, Columbia City, I.L.T.A. president, are in charge of arrangements

LIVAN Public Library board, died recently. Mrs. Ruth McCreery has taken her place on the board.

Dr. H. H. Thacker, past president and member of the public library board at BRAZIL, died July 20.

ADULT EDUCATION IN LIBRARIES

How important are public libraries as adult education agencies? Just what are public libraries doing that may be recognized as adult education? What ought they to be doing?

These questions absorbed the attention of more than 500 librarians and trustees in a highly significant workshop at the conference of the American Library Association in Los Angeles June 22-26. The future of public libraries as educational agencies is certain to be affected, probably re-shaped, as a result of this workshop and the special survey on which it was based.

More than 2000 libraries of the country had participated earlier this year in the A.L.A. Survey of Adult Education in Public Libraries and State Library Extension Agencies, made possible by a grant to A.L.A. from the Fund for Adult Education.

Small and Large Libraries Surveyed

The survey had deliberately covered small libraries as well as large; approximately half of the participating libraries served populations of 2500 to 10,000. The preliminary findings showed that more than half of all reporting libraries carried on a substantial amount of adult education activities, and identified the specific activities and their frequency of occurrence. These activities were summarized in general terms as follows, in the order of importance, namely (1) sponsoring own adult education activities (2) furnishing consultants (3) providing materials (4) furnishing specialists (5) furnishing meeting places (6) contributing money (7) carrying on training classes.

At Los Angeles the preliminary findings of the survey were studied in a series of meetings conducted by the Public Libraries Division. Twenty separate group discussions were held, each group meeting twice. The reactions and recommendations from all these groups were then summarized in a closing general session. This summary may be highlighted as follows:

- (1) Libraries must re-define their purpose to determine whether their basic educational role is to help other agencies or to conduct educational programs of their own as "primary sources for informal adult education."
- (2) More funds and more staff are needed, and are justified, for adult education services, but limited resources are no excuse for lack of such services. "Resources are in the mind and the will."
- (3) Small libraries can overcome their relative lack of resources by pooling resources with other libraries, by utilizing the state library agency and state university, by recruiting volunteers to help, etc.
- (4) More and better training for adult education in libraries is needed, i.e. in library schools, including summer courses; in-service training, including cooperation between libraries; utilization of training offered by non-library agencies; the production and use of films for such training.
- (5) Audio-visual materials and programs are an invaluable asset for adult education in libraries, i.e. serving as an information center at least for such materials; supplying educational films, as local agent for a state agency or by joining a film circuit; utilizing educational radio and television.
- (6) Libraries should know the educational needs of their community, cooperating with other agencies in studying needs and in planning to meet the needs.

NEW HISTORICAL BUREAU HEAD

Hubert H. Hawkins has been appointed director of the Indiana Historical Bureau, succeeding Howard H. Peckham, who resigned to become director of the Clements Library in American History at the University of Michigan.

Mr. Hawkins comes to the Historical Bureau from Butler University where he has served on the History Department faculty for the past seven years. He is a native Hoosier and a 1938 graduate of DePauw University with an A.M. in history from Western Reserve University.

He has had teaching experience at state teachers colleges in Fredonia and Buffalo, New York, Terre Haute, Indiana and at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee. He was for two years editorial assistant on the staff of the Mississippi Valley Historical Review, and in 1952-53 prepared and gave a television course in American government over station WFBM-TV Indianapolis under the sponsorship of Butler University.

Mr. Peckham has served as director of the Historical Bureau and secretary of the Historical Society since 1945. Before coming to Indianapolis he was associated with the University of Michigan as curator of rare books at the Clements Library. His many friends in Indiana wish him success in his new position.

Hubert H. Hawkins

ABOUT THIS ISSUE

Readers of Library Occurrent will note the abbreviated form of the present issue. This represents an effort to cooperate with the State Administration in a program of strict economy affecting all governmental operations. We have attempted to retain what is essential for purposes of information and record.

Suggestions for future issues will be welcomed by the editor.

ALA CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

Two Indiana libraries figured prominently in the conference activities at the American Library Association conference held in Los Angeles, June 21-27.

The South Bend Public Library received one of the John Cotton Dana awards for excellence in public library publicity in cities from 100,000 to 200,000 population. A scrapbook illustrating the public relations project undertaken there was the basis for judging the South Bend program. It included newspaper clippings, radio scripts, pictures, bulletins, and book lists.

The Fort Wayne Public Library was given special recognition for its generosity in supplying meeting room signs for all sessions of the conference. These were made on the library's embossing machine.

Declaration Affirming Freedom to Read

America's freedom to read dominated discussions in many of the conference meetings. A seven-point declaration prepared by the A.L.A. and the American Book Publishers Council denouncing recent attempts to censor books and to label some as dangerous was adopted by the A.L.A. Council and was also approved by the board of directors of the publishers organization. This statement was reprinted in full in Publishers Weekly, July 4, and the August Library Journal.

A letter from President Eisenhower in reply to a letter to him written by Robert B. Downs, A.L.A. president, was read at conference. The President commended libraries for their courageous stand in defense of freedom of inquiry, of the spoken and written word, and of the exchange of ideas. The text of the letter appears in the July-August A.L.A. Bulletin, July Library Journal, and was included in the State Library Extension Division Bulletin sent to Indiana libraries early in July.

Mr. Downs, speaking at the first council meeting June 22, deplored the "current wave of anti-intellectualism manifesting itself in attacks on books, on free speech, and all those rights we have long held to be guaranteed by the first Amendment to the United States Constitution." He praised the A.L.A. Committee on Intellectual Freedom for its activities in combating the attacks on libraries, the textbook controversies, and other attempts to repress and to restrict freedom to read.

Intellectual Freedom Workshop

This committee reaffirmed its stand against such practices in a pre-conference workshop June 20 and 21. Experts in the fields of education, publishing, journalism and librarianship spoke of the responsibilities for book selection in libraries of all types and the continuing obligation to resist pressure from groups in the community seeking censorship of freedom to read and to think independently.

Outstanding among the many division and group meetings were the workshop sessions of the Public Libraries Division. The preliminary findings of the recently conducted Survey of Adult Education in Public Libraries were studied at this workshop, which is reported elsewhere in this issue.

CURRENT ADDITIONS FOR AN INDIANA COLLECTION

Some Books and Pamphlets about Indiana or by Hoosier Authors,
Compiled by HAZEL W. HOPPER, Indiana Division, State Library

AGLE, NAN HAYDEN and WILSON, ELLEN.

Three Boys and a Tugboat. Illustrated by Marion Honigman. 1953. 121p. Scribner, $2.25.

The triplets, Abercrombie, Benjamin and Christopher, and their dog, John Paul Jones, have a wonderful sea-going experience on the tugboat which their uncle captains. Ellen Wilson is the wife of author, William E. Wilson. She lives in Bloomington where her husband is on the Indiana University faculty.

BREWSTER, PAUL G. American Nonsinging Games. 1953. 218p. University of Oklahoma, $3.75.

Paul Brewster has brought together 150 of the better known games, drawn from every state in the Union. Each game is clearly and simply described and in some cases diagrams are used to help in directing the game. Information about the origin of the game is given. Mr. Brewster compiled Ballads and Songs of Indiana in 1940.

BRIGGS, HAROLD E. and ERNESTINE B. Nancy Hanks Lincoln, a Frontier Portrait. 1953. 135p. Bookman Associates, $2.50.

The authors state that the object of this book is to bring together the widely scattered information dealing with Nancy Hanks Lincoln, and as far as possible, to separate tradition from fact. The book was written after an exhaustive study of frontier women, and Nancy Hanks Lincoln was a typical example of the pioneer woman of Kentucky and Indiana.

ESAREY, LOGAN. Indiana Home. With pictures by Franklin Booth and Bruce Rogers. 1953. 121p. Indiana University Press, $15.00.

Here is truly a Hoosier book, not only because of subject matter but also because of the author, illustrators and publisher. Mr. Esarey, who was born in Perry County, was a popular history professor at Indiana University, where he inaugurated courses in Indiana history and history of the Middle West. Both of the illustrators are native Indianans. Franklin Booth was born in Hamilton County and settled in New York where he was a well known free lance illustrator. Bruce Rogers, one of the most noted designers of fine printing in America, was born in Lafayette and attended Purdue University. Indiana Home was originally published by R. E. Banta of Crawfordsville. This edition is by Indiana University Press.

HOLT, HARRY Q. History of Martin County, Indiana. 1953. 366p. Stout's Print Shop, Paoli, $5.00.

Martin County was one of the few counties in Indiana without a volume length history, and seven years ago Harry Holt, then county superintendent of the Martin County schools, set out to rectify this deficiency. During the seven years most of his "nonworking hours" have been spent poring over courthouse archives, examining church and cemetery records and scattered files of old newspapers and in interviewing hundreds of the older citizens of Martin County. The result is a fine piece of work and a welcomed addition to the history of Indiana.

INDIANA STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Labor Laws of Indiana. 1953. 237p. The Chamber, $4.50.

This is a compilation of Indiana laws relating to employment, including industrial codes relating to health and safety adopted by the Commissioner of Labor. It also includes a directory of state and federal labor agencies and a check list for small business establishments.

MARTIN, MARTHA. O Rugged Land of Gold. 1953. 223p. Macmillan, $3.00.
It was winter in Alaska and Martha Martin was alone, having been cut off from civilization by a landslide. Her husband was missing, her right arm was broken, and she was awaiting the birth of her child. Using her diary as background, she has told the story of that winter alone in the wilderness and of the birth of her little girl. The author was born in Indiana.

MASON, MIRIAM E. Dan Beard, Boy Scout.

Illustrated by Paul Luane (Childhood of Famous Americans Series) 1953. 192p. Bobbs, $1.75.

Daniel Boone was Dan Beard's hero. He wanted to be just such a woodsman. He learned the lessons of woodcraft and handicrafts which he was to develop and teach to generations of American boys. Dan Beard was the organizer of the Boy Scouts of America.

RIKER, WILLIAM H. Democracy in the United States. 1953. 428p. Macmillan, $3.50.

Dr. Riker, a Hoosier born political philosopher, analyzes American government and the political system in terms of a moral question: To what extent do they fulfill the democratic ideal? He discusses such subjects as suffrage, civil liberties and the party system, Congress, the Presidency, the Supreme Court and federalism. The author is a native of Indianapolis.

ROSSOW, ROBERT. Tex Rains: Culver Trooper. 1953. 248p. Dogg, $2.50.

Davy Rains, a sensitive young Texan won a scholarship to Culver, his father's beloved prep school. This is the story of his experiences throughout his four years at the famed military academy and of the customs and traditions of the school. Colonel Rossow is a member of the Culver staff.

U. S. CENSUS OF POPULATION. 1950. Detailed Characteristics, Indiana. Government Printing Office, 65 cents.

This publication includes information for large areas in Indiana on age, race, marital status, education, employment, income, occupation, industry, etc.

WASHBURNE, HELUIZ and BLACKMORE, ANAUTA. Children of the Blizzard. Illustrated by Kurt Wiese. 1952. 192p. Day, $2.50.

Here is a story for children about Saluma and his Eskimo friends based on true incidents in the life of one of the authors, Anauta, who is a native Buffin Island Eskimo. Anauta came to the United States about twenty years ago and now lives in Indianapolis. Her life story is told in the book, Land of the Good Shadows, which was also written with Heluiz Washburne and published by the John Day Company in 1940.

WALLACE, LEW, Ben Hur (Great Illustrated Classics). 1953. 491p. Dodd, $2.95.

A special introduction and biographical sketch by Basil Davenport is included in this latest edition of Lew Wallace's Ben Hur. The book is illustrated with pictures from the story and the author's life.

WILLIAMS, KENNETH P. Lincoln Finds a General. Volume 3. 1952. 385p. Macmillan, $7.50.

The first two volumes of this work on the Civil War follow the military fortunes of the Union Army in the East from Fort Sumter to the spring of 1864. At the end of Volume 2, Grant, the new Commander, was beginning the defensive campaign of Appomattox. In this third volume, Dr. Williams turns back and traces the early years of the war in the West which were to carry Grant, a retired captain of the regular army, to the position of general in chief of the Union Army. The author is on the faculty at Indiana University.

WINDERS, GERTRUDE HECKER. Jim Bowie, Boy With a Hunting Knife. Illustrated by Harry Lees (Childhood of Famous Americans Series). 1953. 192p. Bobbs, $1.75.

Jim Bowie, about whom this biography was written, was a celebrated Indian fighter who lost his life at the siege of the Alamo in the war of Texas against Mexico. The author lives in Indianapolis.

ADULT EDUCATION

- (7) Libraries should reach more community groups with their services and should work more closely with other adult education agencies.
- (8) Workshops within states would aid in promoting and improving adult education, as at state library conferences or under other appropriate auspices.
- (9) Further studies are needed to establish quality and standards for adult education in libraries and to weigh the relative significance of service to individuals and service to groups by libraries.

The Los Angeles workshop concluded with the announcement that the A.L.A. Survey will appear first in the form of a readable briefer report for general use, to be followed later by a more complete report.
